Position Summary

The University of Tasmania is building a vision of a place-based University with a mission to enhance the intellectual, economic, social and culture future of Tasmania, and from Tasmania, contribute to the world in areas of distinctive advantage. The University recognises that achieving this vision is dependent on the people we employ as well as creating a people-centred University that is values-based, relational, diverse, and development-focused.

This is an exciting opportunity to join a dynamic team in Paramedicine, in the School of Medicine which is part of the College of Health and Medicine at our Rozelle Campus in NSW. The Lecturer in Paramedicine is Teaching Intensive position and provides an opportunity to progress an academic career aligned with a new strategic direction at the University of Tasmania.

The Lecturer in Paramedicine will deliver contemporary high-quality teaching, develop innovative and evidence-based distinctive content and be responsible for the coordination of units including quality and compliance and assessment. The successful candidate will teach within the postgraduate and undergraduate Paramedicine courses and will have digital capability to develop and enhance high quality learning experiences. The successful candidate will also be required to contribute to research relevant to their area of expertise and interest.

We are an inclusive workplace committed to 'working from the strength that diversity brings' reflected in our Statement of Values. We are dedicated to attracting, retaining and developing our people and are committed to inclusive principles. We celebrate the range of diverse assets that gender identity, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, age and life course bring. Applications are encouraged from all sectors of the community. Tell us how we can make this job work for you.

What You'll Do

- Make an effective and sustained contribution to the University in achieving its strategic objectives and fulfilling its operational responsibilities through the College of Health and Medicine.
- Undertake contemporary scholarly teaching in undergraduate and postgraduate programs including online and face to face learning. Coordinate units and develop distinctive strategically aligned course and unit content.
- Undertake high-quality research aligned with the School and College strategic plans, contribute to securing external competitive and other funding, and to publish research findings, in order to meet and regularly exceed the University's research performance expectations
- Contribute to the development of sustainable transformative professional stakeholder partnerships and collaborate across the broader College to deliver on the learning and teaching strategy.
- Undertake other duties as assigned by the supervisor.

What We're Looking For (success criteria)

- A Post Graduate Degree in Paramedicine, or in a relevant discipline, with significant relevant clinical experience as a paramedic.
- Registration, or evidence of an application for registration, with the Paramedicine Board of Australia.
- Demonstrated experience and capability in University-level learning and teaching including digital technology and the development of online learning.
- Proven experience in developing transformative professional partnerships and the ability to collaborate across the disciplines within the College ensuring both strategic alignment and operational efficiency of the course and unit content.
- Excellent oral and written communication skills, with a demonstrated student-centred learning and teaching philosophy and the ability to work effectively with, students, staff, and stakeholders.
- Commitment to impactful research that makes a worthwhile contribution to the field of Paramedicine, demonstrated by a record of quality publications and presentations at conferences
- A demonstrated capacity to align with the University's values, behaviour, and leadership expectations.

University of Tasmania

The University of Tasmania is an institution with an enduring commitment to our state and community, and a strong global outlook. We are committed to enhancing the intellectual, economic, social and cultural future of Tasmania. Our Strategic Direction strongly reflects the University community's voice that our University must be place based but globally connected as well as regionally networked and designed to deliver quality access to higher education for the whole State.

We believe that from our unique position here in Tasmania we can impact the world through the contributions of our staff, students and graduates. We recognise that achieving this vision is dependent on the people we employ, as well as creating a university that is values-based, relational, diverse, and development-focused.
