School of Languages, Literatures and Cultures and Linguistics

The position is located within the School of Languages, Literatures, Cultures and Linguistics, one of the largest Schools in the Faculty of Arts. Members teach and conduct research across nine European and Asian languages and literatures, literary and cultural studies, linguistics and applied linguistics, history and the social sciences, as well as in several interdisciplinary fields The School's Programs offer studies at undergraduate, honours and postgraduate levels. A variety of in-country programs and short courses are available to students. The School has a wide network of international connections, engages in international research projects, and is involved in collaborative teaching with partner universities abroad.

The Translation and Interpreting Studies Program

Monash University is currently a national leader in the field of Translation and Interpreting Studies. The Master by Coursework in Translation and Interpreting Studies (MITS) is one of a few courses in Australia endorsed at the Advanced Translator, Specialist Interpreter – Health, Specialist Interpreter – Legal, and Conference Interpreter levels by the National Accreditation Authority for Translators and Interpreters (NAATI). We also run Double Master Degrees, PhD programs in translation, interpreting and intercultural studies, as well as Professional Development short courses. The program has established strong collaboration with a range of industry bodies, international organisations, associations and government agencies. These, along with cross-faculty partnerships, allow our students to undertake professional internships in a range of areas. T&I students have the opportunity to work with students from other Faculties within the university setting, then build on that experience in professional workplaces with industry partners. Students can also engage with literary translation as Monash University hosts The AALITRA Review and runs seminars and workshops on literary translation.
